The Other Holocaust

Yes, I know, Gaza, as a concentration camp, is bigger than Auschwitz, and what rains from the sky is not gas but fire and shrapnel. Nor are those murdered Jews, but Palestinians, but the horror is the same. The genocide in Gaza is also a holocaust.

« Dernières nouvelles, le Hamas a tiré une roquette »

Can you imagine following the gassing of Jews live and in person? To witness every day, live and in full color, the extermination of Jews in the crowded showers of a huge concentration camp? Can you imagine, the gas coming out of the shower heads that hang from the ceiling, night after night, while thousands of Jews surrounded, imprisoned, are collapsing dead, one on top of the other? Can you imagine the international community suggesting to the SS to respect international rights and conventions, or moderation in the use of gas, a truce, a stop to humanitarian gas to help today those who tomorrow will be gassed? Can you imagine the Allies recognising that Nazi Germany, which, of course, has the right to defend itself, must keep, in addition to the forms, the proportion of its responses? That, perhaps, six million murdered Jews is an excessive proportion, which would have been better three?

You don't have to imagine it anymore. You can see it every day in the media. Yes, I know, Gaza, as a concentration camp, is bigger than Auschwitz, and what rains from the sky is not gas but fire and shrapnel. Nor are those murdered Jews, but Palestinians, but the horror is the same. The genocide in Gaza is also a holocaust.
