Iraq Carnage: 41 Killed, 150 Wounded

By Margaret Griffis

September 30, 2012

The relative calm of the last several days was broken this morning when a series of obviously coordinated attacks took place across Iraq. The targets were varied today. Security personnel, Shi'ite pilgrims and civilians were all among the casualties. At least 41 Iraqis were killed and 143 more were wounded. Seven Iranians were also injured in one of the attacks south of Baghdad. A Shi'ite lawmaker, Hakim al-Zamili, who is also on parliament's defense and security committee, said the coordinated attacks meant that al-Qaeda in Iraq is still in business.

In Baghdad, a car bomb in the Karrada district killed two people and wounded eight more; a second bomb exploded killing three and wounding 12 of the people who gathered after the first bomb, including an A.P. photographer. A suicide bomber killed one person and wounded seven more in Shula. In Amil, a gunman killed a policeman; a blast targeting first responders to the shooting left three dead and four wounded. Two policemen were killed and three more were wounded during a bombing in central Baghdad. A police colonel was wounded in a shooting in Mansour.
