Suicide attack in Farah leaves 8 civilians killed or injured

June 29, 2013

A suicide blast rocked western Farah province of Afghanistan on Friday evening.

According to local authorities the incident took place in Bala Bolok district after a suicide bomber detonated his explosives near the convoy of coalition forces.

A local security official speaking on the condition of anonymity said the incident took place at 5pm local time, killing at least 2 civilians and injuring 6 others.

This comes as a group of militants earlier attacked the provincial court in Farah province which left at least 100 civilians killed or injured.

In the meantime the local security official said a vehicle of the coalition security forces was damaged following the attack however there are no reports regarding the coalition forces casualties.

The incident was also confirmed by provincial security chief spokesman but he did not provide further details regarding the casualties.

No group including the Taliban militants has so far claimed responsibility behind the incident.
