District police chief killed in Taliban ambush in Helmand

November 20, 2013

According to local authorities in southern Helmand province of Afghanistan, district police chief for Marjah was killed during an ambush by Taliban militants in this province.

A local security official in Helmand province said, the incident took place on Wednesday morning after a group of Taliban militants ambushed the vehicle of Marjah district police chief.

The official speaking on the condition of anonymity further added that the security guard of Haji Toryalai Jan was also injured the clashes.

No group including the Taliban militants has so far claimed responsibility behind the incident.

Helmand is among the resive provinces in southern Afghanistan where Taliban militants are openly operating in a number of its districts.

Taliban militants frequently target Afghan and coalition security forces, and Afghan government officials.
