Demonstrations in Kabul and Herat calling “Justice for Farkhunda”

March 23, 2015

Dozens of civil society activists have taken to the streets of capital Kabul and the city of western Herat province calling “Justice for Farkhunda”.

They are carrying the photos of Farkhunda, taken during the brutally beating and killing, and ask government to severely punish those responsible for the cruel killing.

In the meantime, Amnesty International has called on the National Unity Government of Afghanistan to drag to judiciary those involved in the killing as well as the security officials who were present at the site of the crime but did not act against it.

Farkhunda a 27 years old Afghan girl was brutally beaten by angry mob and her body was set on fire during daylight in capital Kabul.

Security agencies have arrested 11 suspects so far and the case is under further investigation.

President Mohammad Ashraf Ghani has assigned a 12 member commission to investigate the case and present the finding at the presidential palace.

Also, 13 officials have been suspended for negligence by the Ministry of Interior. But Members of Parliament on their Monday session did not agree with only suspending the officials.

They said those officials need to be dragged to judiciary.
