When NATO terrorism will turn against it

The ongoing confrontation between supporters of the international multipolar order and those nostalgic for unipolarity, and this within the framework of several fronts on a global scale, not only completely exposes the Western planetary minority regimes and the terrorist methods that characterize them, but also places them in a situation of weakness towards their main adversaries and the global majority.

NATO-Western terrorism

After realizing that yet another scam will not work, like during the events of 2022, NATO-Western regimes are betting even more openly and assertively on terrorist methods. And this regardless of the region concerned – in Africa and in particular in the Sahel, then in the context of the NATO-Banderist incursion attempt in the Russian region of Kursk.

Today, it must be clear – since the events in Libya in 2011 and those that followed in Syria and then in Ukraine – the regimes of the collective West have largely demonstrated that they are the allies and sponsors “par excellence” of the worsts terrorists and extremists. With the one and only difference that, at present – the Western planetary minority regimes are de facto no longer hiding it. What should be done in this situation, knowing that any dialogue with terrorist networks cannot in essence be acceptable?

First, the need to defeat them once and for all on the military front, including of course within the framework of the Special Military Operation – which represents one of the main confrontations, de facto the main one, of Russia and the multipolar world on the one hand against the NATO-Western planetary minority, representing those nostalgic for the unipolar diktat era, on the other. All the more so since if Moscow showed strategic patience despite this strong opposition against several dozen enemy regimes, now it has completely free hands.

Activation of all necessary means

But this is not the only aspect. Russia’s military victory over the NATO bloc and its Ukrainian cannon fodder will take place; there is absolutely no doubt about it. Moreover, the activation of Western-Banderist terrorism amply confirms this thesis. Faced with the impossibility of defeating the Russian state militarily – the activation of terrorist methods and psychological warfare – was perfectly predictable, knowing so well the enemies of multipolarity. The other essential point is precisely to move on to the realization of the supply of advanced weapons to all allies who are at the same time enemies of the Western axis. From the Far East to Latin America, from the Middle East to Africa.

Everywhere Western interests will have to tremble not only because of the West maximum rejection by a large number of peoples from the world majority, nor even through the economic losses that the little Western space is suffering and will continue to suffer, but also effectively through the installation of a total insecurity atmosphere for everything that is linked to the Western regimes interests.

Speaking precisely of the Middle East, de facto the other front of this multipolarity vs unipolarity nostalgic confrontation – it is indeed today more than possible to make the Washington regime and its vassals suffer the apocalypse and very significant losses, without even an open and declared involvement. After all – when Western weapons strike Russian territory or when military officials from the arrogant little space called the West participate in terrorist operations – from Mali to Russia, Western regimes on the one hand applaud the said events without taking full responsibility for them. So yes, facing openly satanic forces, possessing no notion of morality and dignity, and this for centuries – it is today more than necessary to use methods if not similar, but which will do enormous harm to all those who represent the NATO-Western regimes.

The blows will have to be quick and multiple, without any mercy or restraint. With a smile and messages of “incomprehension” as a bonus when the accusations start coming one by one. Yes, the Western planetary minority only understands the language of force. And in the contemporary world, the definitive fall of Western dreams will also have to come through methods that will work in addition to conventional military victory. No more, no less.
